

Supervising to Safeguard Children in Education

Course Content

Facilitated by Gill Sarginson (NLE) this training is designed to introduce those in leadership roles, particularly although not exclusively, the Designated Safeguarding Leads, to supervision. Understanding the variety of factors that might affect the way in which staff respond to vulnerable children, and the role of supervision in managing anxiety and providing emotional support to staff, is central to the course.

Session Details

18th February 2020

1.30pm – 4pm

Course Outcomes

Participants will be offered the opportunity to:

- Consider why effective supervision is important in keeping children safe from harm
- Understand what good supervision to safeguard students in schools looks like
- Consider the impact of anxiety, how emotions may impact on staff, and consequently critical thinking and decision making
- Practice using the supervision cycle and asking appropriate questions that will enable reflection and analysis to support effective decision making
- Understand the importance of record keeping, including recording supervision discussions, and how to use the systems in place to achieve this.
